Dear Anne-Marie,

We both have never known about a Pug before I came across a few pictures online. I had done so much of research but nothing really prepared me for fetching her from your office when we did. I was so nervous. !

Our drive back home to Jnb was looong and she was so quiet, but those eyes...! her first night was amazing, I hardly slept and not because she was awake crying the whole night but because I was so nervous that something fatal would happen to her. [paranoid] it was so silent that I could actually hear her breathing.

Now we find Suri [Her name is Sanskrit and means Sun] having her 'me/girl' time, chilling in her basket, playing with her toys and strutting her stuff with her cute tail and deep eyes, she hasn't had any episodes of crying at night or during the day, That is amazing! I have heard a few bad stories about dogs adjusting after leaving the litter.

Suri is doing so well, she is such a receptive dog, very intelligent as well. I got a instinctual trainer to visit us a few weeks ago - so we have been making good progress, it is a pre entry course to prep her for her first socialisation class... which we should start by the end of the month.

And gosh does she have energy -- since she was still too small for real exercise I initially kept it low, now I increase the time every week... I'm SO glad that you advised me on the female, thanks for that -- I can hardly believe that we have her now for 7 weeks... time has just zoomed past.

I'll send you a few snaps of her soon...

Thanks again for recommending the female... Actually I can't say thank you enough... We are so happy. !!!!

And One for the road: who ever said that Pugs were laid back?

Thanks & Regards
